For example, in Tennessee v. Garner, 471 U.S. 1, 105 S.Ct. 1694, 85 L.Ed.2d 1 (1985), the Court upheld the use of deadly force to apprehend a suspect who was fleeing by car and who, according to the evidence, had a gun; in Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 109 S.Ct. 1865, 104 L.Ed.2d 443 (1989), the Court found that the use of force to apprehend a suspected robbery suspect who was struggling with the police was unreasonable; in Oklahoma City v. Tuttle, 471 U.S. 808, 105 S.Ct. 2427, 85 L.Ed.2d 791 (1985), the Court found that the city could be held liable for the shooting of an unarmed and fleeing individual by police officers who were mistaken about the individual's dangerous propensities; in Graham, supra, the Court held that use of deadly force against a fleeing burglary suspect who posed no immediate threat to the police officer or others was unreasonable; in Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 107 S.Ct. 3034, 97 L.Ed.2d 523 (1987), the Court held that the use of deadly force against a fleeing or escaping suspect who does not pose an immediate threat is constitutionally reasonable unless the suspect poses an immediate threat of violent or serious physical harm to the officer or others. The Supreme Court has
